BLOOMING SIZE PHALAENOPSIS

As this goes to press, PHALAENOPSIS plants ("Moth Orchids") are just beginning to make up their bloom spikes. Dec., Jan., Feb., and March are the months when they are at the peak of their bloom production. So, now is the time to order if you want some to flower for you this Winter or Early Spring. It is difficult if not impossible to get them to you with spikes in perfect condition after they are too far advanced.

What could make a more handsome gift to some Orchid loving friend - or to yourself, if you have some unspent Christmas money - than a Phalaenopsis in spike? Even the plants are handsome, which cannot truthfully be said of all Orchids! And with a long, graceful spray of white or pink dogwoodlike blooms, they are really a lovely sight to behold!!!

Orchidists who have them, declare there is nothing that gives more all-around satisfaction than the dainty looking but long-lasting Phalaenopsis sprays. To get the most out of yours, study Page N in your folder.

- #Ph-15 P. DORIS, LANCASTER X P. ELIZABETHAE, PALMFIELDS - Fine, large, heavy Whites.
- #Ph-16 P. HAWAII X P. PINK DAWN - Probably the deepest pink I have to offer.
- #Ph-20 PHAL. ANN FISHER - Average size of bloom slightly larger than above; pinkness just a shade less intense.
- #Ph-21 P. PINK DORIS X P. PINK HAWAII - Another good, pink cross.
- #Ph-24 P. HAWAII X P. DORIS - Less intense pink than above three, but all should have that delicate apple-blossom flush.
- #Ph-27 P. HAWAII X DORIS X ROTHSCHILDIANA - Expect this to be close to our own cross, PHAL. BABY GIRL that many visitors have admired.
- #Ph-34 P. AMABILIS X P. CAST IRON MONARCH - Good White cross.
- #Ph-35 P. DORIS X P. HECUBE - One of the newer White hybrids; should be large.
